NEWBERN, N. C., September, 27.—
On November 10th there will be unveiled here in the Federal Cemetery veiled here in the Federal Cemetery a monument to the Rhode Island dead buried here.—The monument has arrived, and has been set in place. Some of the stones weighed as much as 7,000 pounds. The monument has been boxed up, and as soon as the statue arrives, it will be put in place. It is presumed that quite a delegation of Rhode Islanders will be present at the unveiling, and that it will be made an occasion such as that of the New Jersey monument unveiling two years ago.

The revenue cutter Pamilico has gone to Norfolk, Va., for some changes, alterations and repairs to her machinery.

The force in the Norfolk and Southern Railroad shops has been increased recently, but is yet not as large as it was a year ago. The work for more than half of the whole system is done here, and besides repairs on cars, there are at times from affected to twenty engines about the shops, some of which have been there for more than a year, and have not yet been touched.

The shipment of fish from Newbern, Beaufort and Morehead City has been very heavy for the past week or so. For some days it has required two extra express cars on the morning train to take care of the shipment. monument to the Rhode Island dead will, reign supreme, there being no other members of the royal family, near,

Nothing is decided about the house-hold. The prince has always refused anything like royal state for himself, but his friends say that, given the unique position of his wifeas an American, and being married without the entire cordial consent of his family, he may insist upon it for her sake, and she will thus have a couple or more ladies in waiting. Their selection will not be as difficult as has been represented. A great deal was said at one time about the Italian aristocracy, many of whom have royal blood in their veins, refusing indignantity such a position. But, notwithstanding their real jeth-says, several have already caused to come to the duke's ears that they would accept "the honor with satisfaction.

It is said that it is not Italians whom the duke's bride need fear, but her own compaty ots—yes, all American princesses, duchesses, countesses, etc.—and there are scores in Rome alone who dislike the prospect of being queened over, as they express it, by an Elkins, and will make themselves disagreeable if they safely can. Fortunately, in Genoa there are none, and when in Rome they cannot disturb the peace of a royal princess protected by the King and Queen in their own palace.
